Can't believe I never played this game as a kid. Some good old fashioned gameplay to be found here. Feels almost like Burnout at times. Fantastic... and considering the fact that I got it for $5 on sale I can't fault it.

. For those looking for a FML, forget it. The game is ages from that. it's basically a fake sale. at this stage should only be a beta. There is so much things to improve, it's difficult to point one... i'll just say, did you played cm95/96? this game looks older than that.. I highly recommend this game. Its challenging, and casual. I love it and im not even a poker player.. Very grindy game and quite some room for improvements. I mean bindable controls, anyone?! I really had to use AutoHotKey to get special skills on my mouse. But although the game seems quite simple on first glance, it's also very addictive. Once you get started, you will want more items. Bigger ships and better weapons to try new tactics and to pay THEM back what THEY did to YOU. :) Yet if it hadn't been possible to get it to afk-auto-leveling to some degree, I had probably given up a long time ago, before the RSI syndrom kills my hand and arm completely. Anyway, it's still getting updates as of 2019 and I bought it 2016.. jogo bem casual. it always lags out i cant play it

Life as a mob in a MMORPG

This game is pure charm! Some puzzles can get somewhat frustrating and the fact that everything shatters into a million pieces and then hinders your movement is the biggest gripe I have with this game. That being said I still love it.

If you played MMORPGS then I think you will enjoy the banter that comes from the heroes even if it's a little corny. There's nothing much else to say. It's a pretty basic platformer with the usual puzzles, only the setting is what separates it from the rest and like I said the charm is off the charts (at least for me).

The map editor function is a bonus.. Entertaining puzzle game; some of the enemies can be quite frustrating depending on if you luck out with the puzzle gems.. Terrible game, the pictures on the store page might look cool but don't be fooled, this game is worth AT MOST $1. I feel like I've been cheated out of $20 by this game, as it's literally just a grid of "planets" you use those planets to stockpile resources and then build ships. It's a waste of time and money.. The mission statement of Vertex Pop is to use satisfying procedurally generated imagery in a quick to learn, hard to master play-style. This is absolutely accomplished here.

Controls: since I have this on the PC I tried with both the 360-style controller via USB and the keyboard/mouse, and I enjoy them both for different reasons. Everything is tight and responsive, and at no point are you frustrated by it.

Visuals: Like VertexPop's earlier entry Orbit1, the visuals are simple and stunning at the same time. Since they're procedurally generated, not only are they performant, they flow very seamlessly along with the motion of the gameplay itself in a very aesthetically pleasing and informative way. My only gripe is that sometimes the pulsing backdrop obscures some of the potentially dangerous enemies. This feels intentional, but it was the only time I got frustrated.

Audio: This is by far my favorite part. Though it's not necessarily a fully dynamic music system since it uses a static soundtrack, the sound effects synchronize with the music in a very satisfying way, and you feel very much like everything is coming together in an awesome way that transcends the scoring portion of the game.

Overall: Well worth the price of admission, this game will keep you company when you're bored with AAA titles, and you'll find yourself coming back to it when you're trying to engage your subconscious between work tasks. Almost as effective as a walk in the park!

. Shadow Puppeteer is a awesome game! It have a beautiful design and a new and unique gameplay with kind of a creepy Tim Burton movie feeling. I played in single mode and did not have any problems coordinate the two characters. I think the game have just the right amount of difficulty, yes some levels were a little difficult like the final boss and so on, but true gamers like a challenge and who dosent love the feeling of beating a complex game. Playing with two characters at the same time is not a struggle just double the fun ;D I recommend to give this game a chance and check it out!. Cute little puzzle game. Very good game if you want to pass the time and don't want to play something too hard.
